

Abstract

The invention relates to a method for hydrogen peroxide plasma sterilization, wherein the chamber temperature is set at less than 39°C throughout, and containers with temperature-sensitive products can be efficiently sterilized without the temperature-sensitive products showing a significant loss of activity or degradation.

Attorney Docket No.: 06478.1464